JH: Everything sounds better in Le French. I learned long ago that peppering my language with a well placed mon dieu or a zut alors! makes for a much better story. The lovely Maya clearly learned this lesson by naming her Greenpoint shop Le Grenier—French for “the attic.” Think about it. “The attic” elicits visions of cast-off bread makers and worn-once Snuggies. Quite the opposite, Le Grenier is filled with beautiful, ornate silver table settings and fetching cafe au lait bowls. Perhaps it’s just truth in advertising, but Le Grenier is fantastique.
